Can-Do Statements

Performance Indicators for Language Learners

Can-Do Statements

Preface

The NCSSFL-ACTFL Can-Do Statements are self-assessment checklists used by language learners to assess what they “can do” with language in the Interpersonal, Interpretive, and Presentational modes of communication. These modes of communication are defined in the National Standards for 21st Century Language Learning and organized in the checklist into the following categories:

- Interpersonal (Person-to-Person) Communication
- Presentational Speaking (Spoken Production)
- Presentational Writing (Written Production)
- Interpretive Listening
- Interpretive Reading

Ultimately, the goal for all language learners is to develop a functional use of another language for one’s personal contexts and purposes. The Can-Do Statements serve two purposes to advance this goal: for programs, the statements provide learning targets for curriculum and unit design, serving as performance indicators; for language learners, the statements provide a way to chart their progress through incremental steps. The checklists are best used by learners and learning facilitators as part of an overall reflective learning process that includes:

- setting goals
- selecting strategies
- self-assessing
- providing evidence
- reflecting before setting new goals

The more learners are engaged in their own learning process, the more intrinsically motivated they become. Research shows that the ability of language learners to set goals is linked to increased student motivation, language achievement, and growth in proficiency¹.

The NCSSFL-ACTFL Can-Do Statements are a revision of the NCSSFL 2009 LinguaFolio® Self-Assessment Checklist² and may be used by learners as a stand-alone self-assessment or as part of the LinguaFolio® compendium.

For Learners: How can you use the Can-Do Statements?

Use the checklists to record what you think you can do. You may realize that your progression may not be the same for each mode: Interpersonal, Interpretive, or Presentational. This is to be completely expected. For example, you may progress more quickly in Interpretive Reading than in Interpersonal Communication. You will begin to determine your progress on the proficiency ladder by assessing each mode separately. Include evidence electronically or in a hard copy to support your self-assessment selections. Uploaded audio, video, or text files, linked to specific Can-Do Statements, can provide evidence of what you can do. You can validate your self-assessment estimates by comparing them to ratings on official tests you may have taken, such as AAPPL, Advanced Placement, ACTFL OPI, etc.

The header statement at the beginning of each proficiency level is a Global Can-Do Benchmark or general description of the proficiency level from the self-assessment grid. The bold statements are the main indicators for that mode and that level, followed by specific examples (I can...). Check off a specific can-do statement when you are able to demonstrate that you can perform that specific task. It is not necessary to demonstrate every task in order to check off the main Can-Do Statement as some examples may refer to individual goals that are not your own. You may set your own goals in the blank space following “I can...” You are encouraged to look ahead to tasks at the next higher level to identify the goals you want to set for yourself.

The current Can-Do Statements are strategically aligned with the *ACTFL Proficiency Guidelines 2012*³ and the *ACTFL Performance Descriptors for Language Learners*⁴ to reflect the continuum of language learning from the Novice through the Distinguished levels and to provide a common marker for reporting performance in each mode of communication. This allows learners to chart their progress and learning facilitators to document learner growth on nationally and internationally recognized scales.

These Can-Do Statements describe the specific language tasks that learners are likely to perform at various levels of proficiency. It is important to note that many of the terms used in the Can-Do Statements are consistent with the way in which these terms are defined in the Guidelines⁵ and are intended to reflect the common terminology that defines key characteristics of the ranges of performance found in ACTFL documents related to language learning and teaching. For example, in Interpersonal Communication at the Advanced-Low level, the ability to describe people, places, and things means that the learner can provide a verbal representation of that person, place, or thing, in an organized way and with some detail. Likewise, at the Superior level, the ability to support an opinion means that the learner can discuss complex issues at length by structuring arguments and developing hypotheses.

Can-Do Statements and the Common Core State Standards for English Language Arts⁶

The NCSSFL-ACTFL Can-Do Statements mirror much of what is addressed in the Common Core State Standards (CCSS) for English Language Arts (ELA) and Literacy. Learning another language, just like learning one's native language, involves learning to read, write, speak, listen, comprehend, communicate, and use the conventions of language. The Common Core Anchor Standards for ELA and Literacy define the skills learners should demonstrate to be college and career ready. Similar college and career readiness performance is described in the Can-Do Statements at the Advanced and Superior levels. Whereas the CCSS for ELA and Literacy are scaffolded by grade level, the NCSSFL-ACTFL Can-Do Statements are organized by proficiency level. This is done to accommodate the multiple entry points at which one can begin learning a language in or outside of school⁷ and to reflect the fact that different languages require varied amounts of time to reach the same level. Both the CCSS for

For Learning Facilitators: How can you use the Can-Do Statements?

Use the Global Can-Do Benchmarks and main indicators to set long-term learning goals. Ask yourself what you expect your learners to be able to do with language after one semester, after one year, or after several years, and re-evaluate your goals when informed by assessment. Choose more specific can-do statements or customize new ones to establish learning targets for thematic units and lessons. These targets can help drive your instruction to be more performance-oriented and provide more opportunities for your learners to produce language.

Use the checklists to model goal setting for your learners. Share with your students the Can-Do Statements you are targeting for each day's lesson and show them how those targets relate to the unit goals. Encourage learners to set their own goals and provide the guidance and class time for self-assessment and reflection. When developing performance assessments, use wording from the Can-Do Statements in the rubrics, so that your learners know exactly what you expect of them. For example, for Novice-level Interpersonal tasks, the rubric might include "asks and responds to simple questions." For Intermediate-level Presentational tasks, the rubric might include "uses connected sentences."

Finally, help learners to understand how what they write or say actually demonstrates that they have or have not met the goal of the Can-Do Statements. In this way you can help them become more independent learners, able to set their own goals and provide evidence. Learning that is guided by Can-Do Statements enables one to become an autonomous and life-long learner.

ELA and Literacy and the NCSSFL-ACTFL Can-Do Statements are based on an integrated approach to literacy across content areas, with a focus on performance and an understanding of multiple perspectives and cultures.

Development and Publication of the NCSSFL-ACTFL Can-Do Statements

The NCSSFL-ACTFL Can-Do Statements are the result of a collaborative effort between NCSSFL and ACTFL. The collaboration of these two national organizations strengthens the goal of articulating a unified message for the language teaching and learning communities. The Can-Do Statements seamlessly link classroom activities with benchmarked objectives, state and national standards, and with broad proficiency outcomes for life-long learning. The NCSSFL-ACTFL Can-Do Statements are published in the public domain and may be reproduced and disseminated in printed and electronic media for educational, not-for-profit purposes only. The sale of this product is prohibited.

⁷ This discrepancy between the expectations for ELA first and second literacy development is not unexpected, given the limited time on task that most world language learners experience, compared to the amount of time and opportunities for language use in English, the learner's language of daily and academic life.
